031.	The first significant step towards making English a world language was the colonisation of America,
	which increased the figure of English speakers by almost 50 times and began a new chapter in the history of the language.	2
032.	Further settlements followed the first permanent one along the coast as the first group of Puritans arrived in the company of other settlers successfully reaching the land of Virginia.	2
033.	New shiploads of immigrants who came to be settled mainly in the Atlantic areas began to blur the divisions between regional dialects.	2
034.	A vast wave of immigration from Northern Ireland was in the 18th century and most of the immigrants moved
	inland after 1776 due to their pioneering spirit.	2
035.	The population was numbered around 4 million by the time of the first census and grew to nearly 50 million a century later spreading throughout the continent.	2

The history of English language towards becoming a world language is rather intriguing and captivating, yet there are different points of view on the matter. In the article called "World English" the author conveys the idea that English paved its way to being a global global language because of the US colonisation. But this isn't the only possible explanation. If we dive into history, one could find another other explanations. For example, the development and exponential growth of international trade may may be the reason why a lot of people began learning English in the first place, because the Great Britain was the center of global economy at the time. Interestingly, many modern politicians suggest that an aggressive and determined approach towards global politics helped Great Britain attract global the world to learn English in	Количество слов: 198 order to become a part of a strong system. Surprisingly, some of the philosophers could share that cultural significance of Great Britain was the only reason why English is spoken everywhere today.

Developing the topic, I suppose that English language became a global language thanks to economical and technological breakthroughs Great Britain has made throughout its whole history. ~~It~~ If not for them, the world would be different.
