It is a well-known fact that the English language is spoken worldwide. How did it become so popular? How did it evolve during the colonization of America? I have found some meaningful information in the article named 'World English' and it can be the answer to these questions. The author of the text describes how the the colonization affects the language. There were more and more immigrants who were coming to America. They were speaking different languages and dialects, but later they blended in. This is how the modern American English appeared. The population grew quickly, therefore there were a lot of new people speaking English. There may be an opinion that an international language can 'wash out' the culture of a country. For example, there may appear dying languages because more and more people speak English and not their language mother-tongue language. This is particularly true, but however I believe that an international language is a very convenient thing. It makes international socializing and many other things possible. To conclude, the English language has an a inspiring history. A major part of modern society can speak English and this makes us feel united.	Количество слов: 192
