Urban Future The future of urbanization is being passionately discussed. I would like to comment on this topic by regarding the article "Urban Future". "Urban Future" is about the history of urban planning and the challenges of our time. Ebenezer Howard was the person who laid the foundation of this discipline. The first "garden cities" were constructed in the UK, Australia and Germany, though it's practically impossible to say that they describe them as self-contained. Howard also offered to create a greenbelt in order to prevent spread of metropolises. In the real life this would only make things worse. It's also worth mentioning that our perception of urbanization has altered and is now regarded as environmentally and economically advantageous. Of course there are several views of this issue. Some people are still considering the growth of cities as something negative and opt for the rural lifestyle. I share the opposite point of view which marks the cities' better life conditions. In conclusion, I would like to add that instead of being afraid of urbanization we should be morally prepared for it. The aim of modern society is to govern the arriving population.	Количество слов: 189
