The main idea of the text is that via urbanisation countries can fight poverty and improve the quality of life. However, there are a lot of problems in the cities, including poor quality of water, pollution and whatnot. Quite a lot of scientists agree that urbanisation is not the sole way of making a country richer and more developed. The level of urbanisation in Asia, for instance, is higher than in Europe. However, Europe is more developed than Asia. That's why higher level of urbanisation does not mean that the country is more developed than the other ones. From my point of view, urbanisation is a great way of solving the problem of poverty in Africa. This viewpoint can be underpinned by the example of Korea from the text. However, the villages should not vanish completely. Otherwise, there won't be any source of food for the cities. Furthermore, the quality of life is also influenced by technology development, which is paramount. To sum up, I want to make it clear that urbanisation is not the only way of improving the quality of life in poor countries. There's a large number of other aspects, like politics etc. Fighting poverty is always a team work.	Количество слов: 202
