I'm commenting on the article "Lady Columbia, America's first national mascot". This article is about the significant role that Lady Columbia had as a mascot for the USA and how it ^{was} changing through centuries. 36 On the one hand, Lady Columbia represented conventional values of the American nation. After the Revolution, she was that unique figure that was "a symbol of maturity" that was could lead America through westward expansion and the development of democracy. Undeniably, Lady Columbia served as a "collective emblem" that represented all aspirations of the American nation and united them it. 38 On the other hand, with the development of the American nation, Lady Columbia started to become irrelevant. When America had different values New values in education system that differed from the those that were significant in times of Lady Columbia. Democracy was widely established and the Statue of Liberty ^{and Uncle Sam} replaced Lady Columbia. Without any doubt, national values change when times go by. That's why one mascot can't represent the any country for more than several centuries. 68 Personally, I believe that traditional national values should be preserved regardless of time that won't by but change is crucial to in order to avoid stagnation Traditional values to should be preserved and something new should be incorporated in the nation's culture in order to answer the ^{contemporary} time and avoid stagnation. 27	Количество слов: 189
